About Stoves.

The average mean temperature of Hawaii is about 57° according to the thermometers but in the kitchen the lady who does her cooking on a wood or a coal stove imagines it to be 105. There is no reason why the heat in the kitchen should be so great; there's no reason why the ladies should suffer any fatigue from cooking when by the use of a New Process stove the work may be quickly and comfortably done. The New Process is economy in all that the word implies. While you are making money you are happy; when you can save what you have earned by adopting new methods you are happier. C. V. Sturdevant, Waring Block, can supply you with rules and materials for acquiring wealth and saving it.
